

Identification (ID) Requirements for the NDIS Worker Screening Check

You must provide proof of identity documents¹ when you apply for a NDIS Worker Screening Check. SAFE NT need this proof to confirm who you are and match your identity with any relevant criminal history records, to assess whether you are eligible for a NDIS Worker Screening Clearance.

What do I need to provide?

You must supply four (4) identification documents and a photo to link you with your NDIS Worker Screening Check application:

The combination of the identity documents must:

- include your full legal name
- include your date of birth
- include a photograph (provided on one of your identity documents)

Have you changed your name?

If your documents are in different names because your name has been legally changed, you will need to provide one (1) linkage document as evidence of your legal name change, in addition to the documents required above. This may be an Australian marriage certificate, or a revised and reissued Australian Birth Certificate showing your change of name.

Why do I need to provide a 'selfie'?

Providing a photograph of you holding your verified photograph ID, assists SAFE NT confirm your identity. As you will be applying online, your photograph links you with your photo ID card image and details.

The photo is not a passport photo. It must be able to be compared to your Proof of Identity photographic documentation such as your passport or driver licence. It is to confirm you are who you say you are.
